Dear Connor,

We are writing to you today to present you with a spell challenge. This will, of course, not work, what with you being a muggle. However, it is hoped that by the powers of your imagination (of which yours is endless) you will be able to create some wonderful magic today.

Perhaps you will try an invisibility potion? A potion to give you the ability to fly on a nimbus 2000? Maybe your potion will turn your brother into a frog? It is entirely up to you and the limits of your imagination.

We have, for this purpose, enclosed a syringe for you to use. You will need to draw up exact measures of the liquids you choose.

One example may be 15ml of orange juice + 25ml of lemonade. You will need to calculate the total for the potion to work.

Good luck with your magic making,

Yours truly,

Albus Dumbledore
